

THE INTERCOLLEGIATE G. A. CHAMPIONSHIP

PLAYED AT THE ESSEX COUNTY CLUB, MANCHESTER, MASS.,

September 19 to 24, 1910.

By "BUNKER HILL."

COMING THE WEEK after the United States Amateur Championship at The Country Club, Brookline, Mass., the Intercollegiate Golf Association Championship found all the best university golfers of Yale, Princeton, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Williams on hand for the meeting, and they made a week of it at the Essex County Club of Manchester.

The first three days were devoted to the team championship, six singles matches in the morning and three four-ball matches in the afternoon. On Monday, September 19, Harvard beat Pennsylvania by 7 points to 2 and Princeton beat Williams by 8 points to 0. On Tuesday, September 20, Yale beat Harvard by 7 points to 2 and Princeton beat Dartmouth by 6 points to 3. In the final team match on Wednesday, September 21, Yale beat Princeton by 7 points to 2 and thus won the team championship of the association for the sixth time in succession.

Yale also was destined to carry off the individual championship of the association. Two Yale men, H. G. Legg and B. P. Merriman made the low scores in the qualifying round (78), but both were beaten in the first round of match play.

F. C. Davidson, of Harvard, who was the only man from his university left in the tournament after the first round of match play, then won an extra hole match with F. A. Martin, of Dartmouth, defeated G. C. Stanley, of Yale, by 1 up on the home green, and was defeated at the 39th hole of the 36-hole match in the final by R. E. Hunter, of Yale, and that in spite of the fact that he was 3 up on Mr. Hunter after 18 holes had been played. No individual intercollegiate championship has had such a sensational ending or such a prolonged contest. At the third extra hole it was growing dark and Mr. Davidson was careless about teeing his ball, and it fell off the pinch of sand just as he was striking at it, an unfortunate incident which may have cost him the match. Mr. Hunter is entitled, however, to all credit for having played through the strongest field of intercollegiate golfers that ever has played in the tournament and for winning the final match in such a splendidly fought out contest. He played his best when he was several holes down and his scores at the extra holes were 4, 4, 4.

To return to the first day of the tournament, the golf was about as featureless as the day was unpleasant, for it was rainy and gusty, a north-east storm not being the pleasantest thing in the world to encounter on the North Shore of Massachusetts. Williams did not win a match with Princeton, and Harvard was so much stronger than Pennsylvania that the latter won only one match in the singles and one match in the four-ball series in the afternoon. The university men, however, played excellent golf, not only on the first day, but on all the subsequent days of the meeting, when the weather was all that could be desired. It is not true, as some of the older players at the Essex County Club would have had it, that all the university golfers can do is to hit a very long ball and then lose a stroke or two in the approaching and in the putting. The intercollegiate players were evenly matched as a rule, and one man would play a little better than another in the team matches, and meeting him again in the individual championship would get his revenge. These golfers were equal to playing in the low 80's every round and in one of the four-ball matches Karl E. Mosser was 72 and Albert Seckel was 73, the latter having an excellent chance for a record, as he had played out every putt but was indifferent about his play at the last two holes, ah he had already won the match for his side. The summary of the two team matches on the first day follows:

On the second day the Yale team looked much stronger on paper than the one that Harvard was able to get together, and it proved to be so on the links, for Harvard won only one match in the singles and lost the contest right there, for to win all three four-ball matches would not have given them a victory. S. W. Sargent, the Harvard oarsman, was the only one to win for his side. He made a great finish in his match with H. G. Legg, who stood dormie two, but taking three putts on the 17th and 18th greens, lost them both. Mr. Legg missed his drive to the first extra hole and it went into the ditch. Mr. Sargent consequently had no difficulty in winning the hole in 5. Mr. Sargent's round was 83 and Mr. Legg's 82.

Karl E. Mosser was no less than 7 up on A. D. Lyman at the 9th hole, but the latter picked up 5 holes coming home and lost by 2 and 1 only. R. E. Hunter, who was destined to find F. C. Davidson so difficult a man to defeat in the final of the individual championship, was able to beat him by 3 and 2 in the team match.

F. A. Martin, captain of Dartmouth, played against Albert Seckel, captain of Princeton, and won by 3 and 2. Mr. Martin was 4 up at the turn, but Mr. Seckel came home strongly but could not overcome the lead of his opponent. The cards of this match show a total of 77 for Mr. Martin and of 84 for Mr. Seckel, as follows:

Mr. Martin:
 Out—4 4 3 5 4 5 5 5 3—38
 In —4 4 3 5 5 5 3 5 5—39—77

Mr. Seckel:
 Out—6 4 5 5 5 4 5 6 6—46
 In —5 4 3 5 4 4 3 4 6—38—84

The Princeton and Dartmouth teams were better matched than the Harvard and Yale teams, for after the singles had been played, each had won three matches and the result of the contest lay in the four-ball matches. The four-ball matches during the play for the team championship were full of interest and were well contested as a rule, and the speed with which the university men played prevented them from being tedious to the spectators or from blocking the links. Princeton won all three four-ball matches from Dartmouth, the closest being between A.

Seckel and D. W. Houston, against F. A. Martin and C. Wells. The card follows:

Mr. Seckel and Mr. Houston:
 Out—5 3 4 4 4 4 4 5 4—37
 In —4 4 4 6 5 4 3 4 5—39—76

Mr. Martin and Mr. Wells:

In the final of the team championship Yale treated Princeton in precisely the same method that she had treated Harvard, winning five of the six matches and settling the contest then and there. As in the match with Harvard also, the one match to go against Yale was won at the first extra hole, D. W. Houston, of Princeton, defeating R. E. Hunter, who afterwards won the individual championship.

D. W. Houston was out in 41 and was 1 down to R. E. Hunter, but he squared the match on the home green. Both were trapped at the extra hole of the match, but Mr. Houston recovered so well that he holed in 5 to 6 and won the match. Robert A. Gardner, of Yale, was holing nearly everything on the greens in his match with A. Seckel, but the Princeton man was difficult for the former United States amateur champion to shake off. He finally did so at the 17th hole, where Seckel missed a putt of a yard and the Yale man ran down one of 15 feet. Gardner had a 5 for a 77 in this match but he did not play the last hole.

C. P. Eddy, of Princeton, gave Karl E. Mosser a good match, which the latter won by 2 and 1. At the short 16th Mosser's ball hit the pin and he holed a 2, He won the next hole (420 yards), against the wind in 5 and the match by 2 and 1. H. G. Legg was even at the turn with A. G. Kay, the Princeton man, but came home in splendid figures and won by 4 and 3. B. P. Merriman also played excellent golf coming home and defeated G. W. Bunn by 4 and 2.

A. Seckel played with D. W. Houston against G. A. Gardner and B. P. Merriman and practically did all the work in this four-ball match for Princeton, winning by 4 and 2. It was in this match that Mr. Seckel played in 74, as follows:

Out—3 4 4 4 5 4 4 4 3—35
In —4 4 4 5 4 4 3 5 6—39—74

Karl E. Mosser and G. C. Stanley, of Yale, had a better ball of 67 in their match against A. G. Kay and C. P. Eddy and won by 7 and 5. Karl Mosser played out the round and his score was 73, as follows:

Out—4 5 5 3 3 4 4 4 3—34
In —4 4 3 5 6 4 3 3 5—37—73

H. G. Legg and R. E. Hunter, of Yale, had a better ball of 33 for the first nine holes and defeated G. W. Bunn and L. D. Blair by 7 and 5. Their score out was 4 4 3 4 4 4 4 2—33, and they played the next four holes in 4 4 4 5. The summary of the Yale vs. Princeton match:

In the qualifying round for the individual championship H. G. Legg and B. P. Merriman, both of Yale, had the best score, 78, the former winning the play-off, 81 to 85. Their scores of 78 are given in the full with the distances of the holes which also may be found useful in noting the reports of the team matches and of the individual matches:

		H. G. Legg	B. P. Merriman
1,	410	5	5
2,	330	4	5
3,	290	6	4

C. G. Waldo, Jr., beat B. P. Merriman, Yale, by 2 and 1.

A. Seckel, Princeton beat McKim
Hollins, Harvard, by 5 and 3.

A. G. Kay, Princeton beat R. A.
Gardner, Yale, by 3 and 1.

R. E. Hunter, Yale, beat H. B.
Heyburn, Pennsylvania, by 6 and 5.

G. C. Stanley, Yale, beat H. G.
Legg, Yale, by 1 up, 20 holes.

K. E. Mosser, Yale, beat F. T.
Clark, Harvard, by 3 and 2.

F. C. Davidson, Harvard, beat S.
W. Sargent, Harvard by 2 and 1.

F. A. Martin, Dartmouth, beat J. D.
Standish, Jr., Williams, by 1 up 19
holes.

In the above matches Capt. Merriman of Yale was playing against C. G.
Waldo, Jr., a man he had not selected for the Yale team. Mr. Merriman took 45 for the first nine holes and was 3 down but he played much better coming home as though he lost the tenth hole he won the next three holes in 4, 3, 5. Mr. Merriman pulled his drive at the fourteenth hole and stood 2 down. The fourteenth was halved and then Mr. Merriman holed a nice putt for a 3 at the short sixteenth hole and was 1 down and 2 to play. Both were in the rough at the seventeenth but Mr. Waldo's third shot was so good that he holed in 4 and won by 2
and 1.

Robert A. Gardner went off in his putting in his match with A. G. Kay, while the latter was particularly good in this part of his game. At the turn the Princeton man was 3 up. Robert A. Gardner halved the tenth after driving into the brook and he looked like winning the next but McKay holed a putt from the edge of the green for a half, Mr. McKay won the twelfth in 3, Mr. Gardner failing on a six-foot putt. The Princeton man now stood

4 up and 6 to play but Mr. Gardner laid his opponent a stymie at the thirteenth and he won the fourteenth in 4 and the fifteenth in 3. Mr. Gardner shanked his iron shot to the sixteenth and played his next into the brook. McKay won the seventeenth by getting his approach very near the pin while Mr. Gardner took three putts on the green and lost the match by 3 and 1.

Albert Seckel was more than a match for McKim Hollins, and K. E.
Mosser, playing a brilliant game, defeated F. T. Clark another of the Harvard men. R. E. Hunter was out in 39 in his match with H. B. Heyburn, the hope of Pennsylvania, and no less than 5 up. G. C. Stanley played a strong game against H. G. Legg and won at the second extra hole.

The matches in the second round were played on the morning of Friday, September 23, and were won as follows:

A. Seckel, Princeton, beat C. G.
Waldo, Jr., Yale, by 4 and 3.

R. E. Hunter, Yale, beat A. G.
Kay, Princeton, by 2 and 1.

G. C. Stanley; Yale, beat K. E. Mosser, Yale, by 1 up.

F. C. Davidson, Harvard, beat
F. A. Martin Dartmouth, by 1 up,
19 holes.

Albert Seckel played the first nine holes in 36 strokes and set a pace with which C. G. Waldo, Jr., could not cope. Mr. Seckel won by 4 and 3 after some of the most brilliant golf seen in the tournament.

F. C. Davidson was one down at the turn to F. A. Martin, but they were even at the home hole the scores of both being 81. At the extra hole, Mr. Martin played his second shot out of bounds and Mr. Davidson won the hole in 5 and the match.

R. E. Hunter led A. G. Kay at the turn and outplayed him coming home. G. C. Stanley, though he proved a sound player all through the tournament, caught Mr. Mosser off the game that he had been playing during the week.

The matches in the afternoon resulted as follows:

R. E. Hunter, Yale, beat Albert Seckel, Princeton, by 3 and 2.

F. C. Davidson, Harvard, beat G. C. Stanley, Yale, by 1 up.

R. E. Hunter had a chance to win both the first and second holes with Albert Seckel but he did not get down his putts after outplaying the Princeton man through the green. Then Seckel should have won the third hole but he stymied himself and lost it. R. E. Hunter won the fourth and then they played fairly good golf to the turn where the match was 1 up in Hunter's favor. Mr. Seckel squared the match at the eleventh but Mr. Hunter's nice shot to the green of the twelfth gave him his 3 and he was 1 up again. Mr. Seckel made a terrible thing of his drive to the long hole pulling his ball so badly that it lay on a bank. From this bank he put a ball out of bounds and he might as well have given up the hole as he finally holed in 8. Mr. Hunter was now 2 up but Mr. Seckel's nice approach to the fourteenth gave him that hole. But Mr. Hunter holed a 15-foot putt for a 3 at the next hole and as his opponent put his ball into the brook at the short sixteenth hole, Mr. Hunter won the match by 3 and 2. The cards:

Hunter:

Out—5 4 4 4 5 5 5 3—40

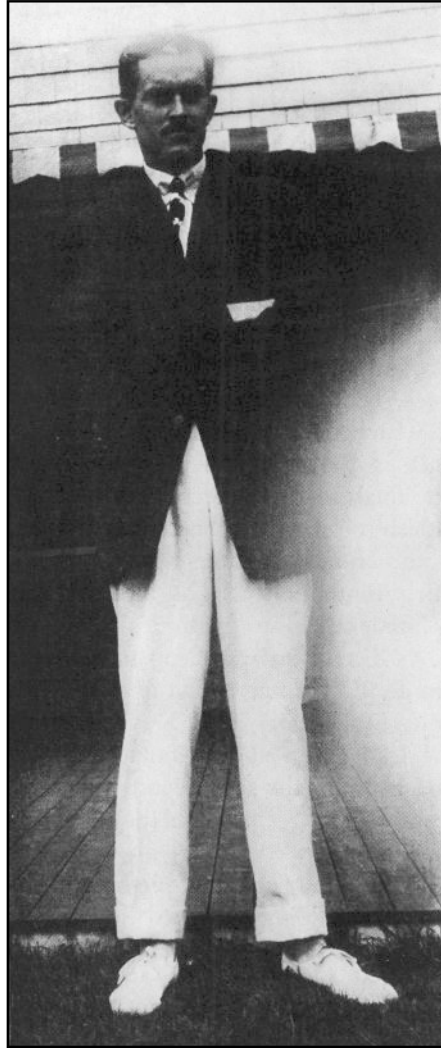

In —4 5 3 7 5 3 3

Seckel:

F. C. Davidson was 1 up at the turn of his match with G. C. Stanley. Going to the seventeenth the match was square, but Mr. Davidson holed his approach of 45 yards at this hole and became dormie one. Mr. Davidson was well on the green at the home hole in 3 while Mr. Stanley put his third into the bunker. Mr. Stanley recovered so well that he ran his ball down for a 5 but Mr. Davidson holed in the same figure and won the match by 1 up. The cards:

So that Harvard and Yale reached the final in the tournament for the fourth time since it has been played. In the fall of 1897, John Reid, Jr., Yale, defeated the late W. B. Cutting, Jr., Harvard; in 1898, J. F. Curtis Harvard, defeated John Reid, Jr.; in 1901, H. Lindsley, Harvard, defeated C. Hitchcock, Jr. Yale.

It is the first time however, that the final in an intercollegiate championship has gone so many extra holes, R. E. Hunter of Yale winning at the thirty-ninth hole as has already been pointed out. In the morning round F. C. Davidson was 2 up at the turn but R. E. Hunter won the next three holes in 4, 4, 3. F. C. Davidson took the lead again at the fourteenth hole and winning the seventeenth and eighteenth stood 3 up when they went to lunch.

R. E. Hunter gained one hole in the afternoon, going out, and he had the match square at the sixteenth hole. They halved the seventeenth and eighteenth holes in 5. R. E. Hunter made two very long shots to the green of the first extra hole but F. C. Davidson's approach was so good that he halved the hole in 4. R. E. Hunter holed a longish putt at the second extra hole and it was halved in 4. Then F. C. Davidson had the misfortune with his tee, as the ball fell from the sand just as he swung at it. As Hunter had sent away a perfect ball he won the hole in 4 and the match. The cards:

Mr. Hunter :

Out—5 5 4 5 5 4 5 5 3—41

At the annual meeting of the association held at the Essex County Club, Manchester, September 23, Robert A. Gardner of Yale was elected president; D. W. Houston of Princeton, secretary, and F. C. Davidson of Harvard, treasurer. The next championship will be played at the Baltusrol G. C. of Springfield, N. J., the second week of September, 1911. The four-ball matches will be played in the morning and the single matches in the afternoon. Three times during the tournament of 1910 the singles decided the match, leaving the four-ball matches mere practice affairs.
