Dear John,

While I have a great fascination in and interest in the masters of golf course design, I am afraid to state that I have not played the Yale course. Indeed, I was there one day to observe what I could from the grounds but I did not have enough time to play the course.

My comments, as general as they are, would be that the golf course looks to be nothing less than a jewel from yesteryear's master architect. Well-played shots and imaginative play are pre-requirements to good scoring.

Good luck with your research.

Sincerely yours,

Hale Irwin
